Akambo Future Leaders Fund

Investment Objective and Strategy

The Fund is a long only equities fund that provides exposure to Australian smaller capitalisation listed companies. The portfolio is actively managed typically investing in 20-35 securities primarily outside of the S&P/ASX 100 Index. The strategy is managed on a GARP (Growth At Reasonable Price) style basis. The Investment Manager searches for companies that offer earnings growth above market levels but at a reasonable price and with a clear understanding/assessment of the risks involved.

Market Commentary

The Small Ordinaries Accumulation Index fell 6.43% in October, significantly below its large cap stablemate, the S&P/ASX 200 Accumulation Index, which rose 1.38%. The main reason for this weakness was small cap resource companies, particularly as the gold price dropped 7% over the month, with the lithium price also declining by 24%.

During the month, our portfolio outperformed by 2.58%. This outperformance was driven by our underweight in resources. The failure of the Firmus IPO (not held) early in the month and then a large downgrade by Next DC (not held), another data centre operator, later in the month had an impact on our holdings of electrical contractors, particularly Maas Group, which had a stake in Firmus, but also GenusPlus and Tasmea. This was despite them being much more diversified with demand remaining strong. Firmus failed because of pricing and Next DC because of local residents' concerns, not because data centre demand has necessarily eroded.

The best performing sector was Consumer Staples (+3.6%) led by the independent supermarket supplier, Metcash (not held). Consumer Discretionary was next (+2.0%), which may appear surprising given the cost-of-living pressures. Within Consumer Discretionary, our holdings in Collins Foods (+11.9%) and Lovisa (+7.0%), which both sell at low price points, performed well given their growing earnings, particularly in offshore markets. Finally, the Financials sector rose 1.2%.

The weakest sector in the small cap index was Materials (Resources), down 15.4% because of the aforementioned fall in prices. Healthcare followed dropping 11.8%, mainly due to speculative healthcare stocks, such as medical technology companies, with no earnings. Finally, Industrials were down 8.5%. Our exposure to this sector reduced our outperformance, particularly because of Maas Group and its exposure to Firmus. The market expected Maas to record a large uplift in its pre-IPO investment, but instead it may turn out to be less than what it originally paid. Maas' underlying operating businesses remain robust.

Economic conditions continued to soften at the margin, though inflation risks remain elevated. The RBA did not meet in October, leaving the cash rate at 4.60% following September's hike, but hotter-than-expected inflation data late in the month firmed expectations of a further increase in November. Headline CPI rose to 4.3% y/y in September from 4.0%, above consensus of 4.2%, driven largely by a further 9.4% rise in fuel prices along with higher housing costs. The monthly trimmed mean rose to 3.6% from a downwardly revised 3.5%, in line with expectations. More concerning for the RBA, the quarterly trimmed mean rose 1.0% q/q in the September quarter, above the RBA's own forecast of 0.8%, lifting the annual rate to 3.7%. Employment fell 39.3k in September, well short of expectations of a 20k rise and reversing August's downwardly revised 29.3k gain. The unemployment rate held at an upwardly revised 4.7%, above expectations of 4.6% and its highest level since October 2021.

We believe our portfolio remains well placed given our focus on companies in attractive industries with growing share, strong balance sheets and accomplished and aligned management. The portfolio is trading on a 12-month forward P/E of 16.7x, which is appealing given the growth on offer. The war in Iran is likely to drag on, impacting inflation, not helped by wage costs and weak consumer confidence. However, we aim to navigate around this and target pockets of strength.

Portfolio Changes

We didn't make any portfolio changes in October. We anticipated Annual General Meetings (AGMs) delivering sombre trading updates and this has indeed been the case to date. Revenue growth is proving elusive and costs continue to climb, which is putting downward pressure on earnings. Small caps have underperformed this calendar year, but many now have dividend support. Amongst this group, we aim to identify those in attractive industries that can grow revenue.

Contributors and Detractors

Our best performer was Data#3 (DTL), which announced a profit upgrade due to IT hardware demand, followed by some of our deep value (P/Es below 7x) holdings such as IPH and Australian Finance Group. Maas Group was our worst performer as the heat came out of the data centre space, and weak commodity prices impacted Liontown, the lithium producer and Nickel Industries, the nickel producer. The latter both being small holdings hence their impact was muted.
